The letters of Secretaries Blaine and Frelinghuysen in relation to American Jews in Russia, calling the attention of the Russian government thereto, have been published. The right of the United States to go to the extent of demanding protection for its own subjects, to the extent which international law allows, is obvious enough. But it may go further and give its friendly offices in behalf of the Jews as a race; for nothing is more certain than that the Russian government has tolerated crimes and barbarities against the Jews which it could and should have suppressed and punished—crimes the most cruel and bloodthirsty, for which no excuse can be offered, save as found in narrow and bitter prejudices which the civilized world has outgrown.

It was a Western 4th of July orator who exclaimed, "Let the American eagle scream!" We find, however, that the Eastern orator is of the same mind, which gives us assurance that while the American eagle soars, American oratory will not become a lost art. Here is the conclusion of a recent speech in the House of Representatives by the Hon. Wm. E. Robinson, of New York: "When I came here I found the American eagle drugged and drowsy, his blood poisoned with political pyemia, his back filled with Lowell garbage, and his pinions wet with the milderew of monarchy. I roused him from his ignoble slumber; I brushed the mildew from his plumage; I gave his majestic voice to the music of Liberty, and his imperial wing to fan the tempest and soar to the sun."

The Presbyterian Journal thinks that if another Arctic expedition is to be started, the moneyed self-advertisers should themselves be the explorers. Certainly, the man who shall provide another Jeannette should go as commander. To show how to make railroad travelling safe, Punch once exhibited a cartoon with a couple of directors tied in front of the locomotive. Of course, no director or commander would ask others to go where he would not go unflinchingly himself.

If you tell your troubles to God, you put them into the grave; they will never rise again when you have committed them to him. If you roll your burden anywhere else it will roll back again like stone of Sisyphus.—Spurgeon.
